

Chorale begins fall season

The Rogue Valley Chorale, now in its third season, will present its fall concerts next week.

The 81-member group, which has been in rehearsal since Sept. 23, will perform at 3 p.m. Sunday at Medford Senior High School auditorium.

Members of the chorale are from many areas of the Rogue Valley, including Grants Pass, Glendale, Eagle Point, Jacksonville, Ashland, Rogue River, Central Point, Talent, Phoenix, and Medford.

The program will include selections by Vaughn Williams and J.S. Bach, and as a special salute to the bicentennial, works by American composer Aaron Copland, who celebrated his 75th birthday on Nov. 15, and a group of selections by Stephen Foster.

The group is directed by Lynn Sjolund and accompanied by Phyllis Hunter. Carroll Graber is assistant director.

The Ashland members of the Rogue Valley Chorale board of directors are Ms. Elizabeth Muller Lorish and Mrs. Tudy Maddox.

The chorale members from Ashland include John and Carolyn Leavens, Billie Phillips, Janet Ivie, Patricia Gaddis, Kathryn Leech, Alan Gray, and from Southern Oregon State College, Elizabeth Peeples and Paul Hedges.

Tickets for the concerts are $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students. They will be available at the door before the performances, or can be obtained from chorale members.
